Personal Safety Tips

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln firmly believes a crime survivor is never responsible for the other person's actions or criminal conduct and it is the fault of the perpetrator alone. The UNLPD is providing the following safety tips in an effort to assist the University community with taking the necessary precautions

- Sexual assault is any sexual activity that occurs without consent. Do not engage in sexual activities without consent from your partner(s). Consent to one type of activity does not automatically mean consent for another. Do not assume you know what the other person wants. Someone incapacitated by alcohol or other substance cannot give consent.
- If you ever feel uncomfortable in a situation or with a person, or someone is behaving disrespectfully, remove yourself from that situation, especially if you are concerned it may become physical. If necessary, create a distraction, and if able, involve others. If you do get into trouble, attract attention to yourself in any way you can.
- Trust your instincts, and if you feel unsafe in any situation, get to a safe place and call for help.
- Intervene in a situation only if it can be done safely and call for help if you witness disrespectful or inappropriate behavior or a violent crime. It is a good idea to discuss how you might handle these types of circumstances in conversations with your friends before you are confronted with a particular situation. Use different scenarios and develop strategies to use in a specific event. Bystander intervention is an excellent way to stop an incident from Occurring.

- Listen, believe, and support someone who discloses a sexual assault. Remember, sexual assault is not the victim's fault. If they feel comfortable enough to tell you about it, they may be in need of support.
- If you experience sexual assault, you can contact any of the following resources in addition to law enforcement:
